INTRODUCTION

The present work is the second volume of the Handlist of Sanskrit and Prakrit Manuscripts in the Library of the Wellcome Institute for the History of Medicine. Like its predecessor, it provides brief descriptions of approximately one thousand manuscripts. Little need be added to the introductory remarks already made in volume I. Work continues on conserving, numbering, wrapping, storing, and documenting the manuscripts, and further volumes of this handlist are in preparation.

A perusal of the Abbreviations will show that I have now given full bibliographical details of the catalogues referred to, rather than merely referring to Janet's Annotated Bibliography of Catalogues (ABC).¹

The layout of entries in this volume is similar to that in volume I, though enhanced by the much better facilities now offered by personal computers in the realm of text formatting.² In particular, please note that, as before, the serial numbers (#) with each entry are merely for use with the indexes to this volume. Readers wishing to order or refer to a manuscript should use its shelf number. This shelf number consists of one of the Greek letters α (alpha), β (beta), γ (gamma), δ (delta), or ε (epsilon), followed by some numbers.

The foliation of the manuscripts perhaps needs clarification in some cases. When a manuscript of, say, ten leaves has been foliated by a scribe, they are described as “leaves 1–10”. But if the leaves have no numbers on them, they are simply called “10 leaves”. This is normally straightforward, although in limiting cases it may be unclear. In manuscript #1095, for example, the foliation is described as “1 leaf, leaf 1”, which means that there is one unnumbered leaf, followed by a leaf with the scribal number 1 on it.

The subject classification used in this Handlist is not sophisticated, and you should look carefully in all indexes and adjacent topic areas when trying to find whether our library has a copy of a particular work. The question of how to divide up Sanskrit literature subject-wise becomes a matter of pure convention in several cases. In the present volume, for example, several stotra and vrata texts are listed under Stotra, when they could equally well be listed under Purāṇa. The stotras themselves often declare that they are part of this or that Purāṇa text, though of course in many cases these affiliations are merely stated honori causa.

The author and title indexes include added entries to material from the body of the manuscript descriptions. For example, #1905 describes the Īśopanisād, but under the title of the larger work of which it forms a part, the Vaijātaṃśiambhiś: both terms are indexed.

Another issue relates to what is meant by “complete” and “incomplete”. As used in this handlist, the term “complete” means that the manuscript appears to be in the state in which the scribe intended it to be when he finished work on it. I.e., one could have a “complete” copy of ten slokas from a purāṇa. The term “incomplete” is used to refer to physical loss of folia, i.e., to flag manuscripts which may one day be completed if the missing leaves are found. Manuscript #1141, for example, is a complete manuscript of an incomplete text.

One area in which I feel that this handlist could be more explicit is in the distinction between bibliographic details supplied from the manuscripts and those supplied by myself as cataloguer from secondary and other sources. Thus, the titles of some well-known works, for example, are supplied by me without comment, even when they are not stated in the manuscript itself (for example when the manuscript is fragmentary). In other cases, square brackets have been used to indicate additions or emendations to titles which are perhaps not obvious.

The Sūcpanā section of the Handlist includes various kinds of lists, including tables of contents of works (anukramanikis), as well as lists of manuscript titles.

Several readers of volume I of the Handlist were kind enough to write to me with corrections and further information about some of the entries. I remain keen to receive such information in the future, and will be very grateful to anyone who can improve or supplement the information in this volume.

I should like to express my heartfelt thanks to Professor David Pingree who has substantially improved the content of this handlist through his proof-reading. Prof. Pingree has been a constant guide in my work on the Wellcome Indic collection, and has contributed in a major way to the cataloguing and general understanding of the collection. The inevitable flaws which remain in this Handlist are of course my responsibility alone.
NOTES AND ERRATA TO VOLUME I

In the decades following the nineteen-twenties when the bulk of the Indic collection first arrived at the Wellcome Institute in London, the manuscripts become somewhat disarranged. As the process of gaining bibliographical control over the collection continues, fragments of manuscripts are discovered, texts are more closely analysed, and numerous joins and separations of leaves are made. It is in the nature of a handlist such as the present one that changes in the organization of the underlying materials will be reflected in emendations and updates to the published information.

I am glad of the opportunity to make special mention in this context of Professor Pingree’s detailed work on the jyotisa manuscripts in the Wellcome Institute’s collection. His studies have led to scores of important joins, separations, and re-orderings of manuscripts and of individual leaves. Professor Pingree’s own major publication describing this part of the collection is imminent, and will render obsolete any earlier remarks on jyotisa manuscripts in the present collection.

Furthermore, the Wellcome Institute’s Conservation Department has done a great deal of work on repairing and cleaning Indic manuscripts over the past decades. In the course of conservation, new leaves are discovered, unreadable manuscripts become readable, and so forth. In short, for several reasons, parts of the collection remain somewhat fluid. The following information corrects errors, and also updates the information published in volume I of the Handlist. References are to serial numbers in the Handlist.

241 read: leaves 2, 2b, 7, 8, ...
258 read: Dîkasarasâkara.
283 Not a commentary on Hâdi, but a work in its own right. Almost certain-ly the same work as the Vrîdatatattvâ of Kaviyâda listed in the catalogue of the Vrîdâvan Research Institute. 1979, serial no. 1115, acc. no. 9441, written in Braj Hindi. The verses of the Wellcome copy appear to be in Dohâ metre. The title might be a scribal error for saptasayâ. (– S. D. Vasa-deva.)
346 read: [With] Taraṅginī; read: Shelved at γ 450.
404 read: Shelved at α 682.
2 leaves. Complete in 12 skandhas. Each part has its own wooden boards; part II’s are ornately carved. Copies by Nârâyana Śarman, great-grandson of Nârâyana Śarman. F. 161 broken at one end.
458 read: leaves 10–113.
471 read: Shelved at α 282.
532 This is a fragment from the Bhâgasvatapurâṇa. (– Usharbudha Arya.)
